THANKSGIVING

PROCLAMATION.

Observe Thursday, the 29th Day of November, 1906.

That the people of Kentucky may properly observe our country's most hallowed custom, I hereby appoint in accordance with the action of the President of the United States that this State observe Thursday, November 29, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer throughout the Commonwealth. On that day all business should be suspended; the eager pursuit for wealth should cease; the restless struggle for profit and gain should give place to quiet and peace, while a grateful people in their usual places of worship shall give thanks to a generous and merciful God, who has so richly blessed us.

Our people have prospered beyond all precedent, our nation in a little over a century has sprung into a position of power and might beyond the boldest dreams of its founders and today commands the admiration and respect of the entire world. In material wealth we are without an equal. Nature has lavished upon us her choicest bounties. The sunshine of peace and contentment sheds its genial light upon a happy land. To deserve and retain the blessings, due recognition should be given to the divine source from which they come. In place of boasting of our greatness, let us humbly praise and thank Him to whom we owe all. The strength and welfare of our Republic, the endurance of its splendid institutions and the progress of our Christian civilization, must depend upon the spirit with which our people can observe the

KENTUCKY AT JAMESTOWN.

Commission Begins Work for Representation at the Big Exposition.

With the purpose of providing for the proper representation of the state at the Jamestown Exposition, to be held in Norfolk, Va., April 26 to November 30th 1907, the Kentucky Jamestown Exposition Commission has been organized and incorporated.

Headquarters have been opened in the Commercial building, Louisville, and a campaign of exploitation has commenced. It is the intention of the commission to make the representation typical of the entire State and a replica of the Ft. of Boonesboro has been agreed upon as the Kentucky building. Funds for the erection of the building and the collection and installation of exhibits will be raised by popular subscription and the sum of $40,000 will be required for the purpose.

The commission is composed of the following members: J. Stoddard Johnston, Louisville, President; John B. Atkinson, Earlinton, Vice President and Director of Finance; Charles E. Hoge, Frankfort, Director of State Building Construction; Malcolm H. H. Crump, Bowling Green, Director of Forestry Exhibits; Jas. M. Benton, Winchester, Director of Exhibits of Manufacturers; Honorary Commissioners: Hubert Vreeland, Frankfort, Director of Agricultural and Horticultural Exhibits; J. H. Fuqua, Frankfort, Director of Educational Exhibits; Charles J. Norwood, Lexington, Director of Mineral Exhibits; William Lindsay, Frankfort, Director of Historical Exhibits. Logan C. Murray, Louisville, is Treasurer, and C. C. Ousley, Secretary. The latter is in charge of the Commission's headquarters.

Subscription books are now open. Any one wishing to contribute should not wait for personal solicitation but may send check, money order or currency direct to Logan C. Murray, Treasurer, American National Bank, Louisville.

To Our Subscribers.

We are not responsible for the delivery of our papers throughout the country. If we fail to deliver any papers at the Mt. Sterling Post Office, said failure is unintentional on our part. We, like all men, are liable to accidents. If a subscriber receives even one copy having his or her name printed on it this is evidence that the name is on our mailing list. We regret that a single paper is mis-carried. We hope that no subscriber who owes us will be so thoughtless as to ask his postmaster to inform us that his paper is "refused," "not wanted." Same will please notify us of desire to discontinue and also send amount due, and we will with pleasure discontinue.

For a man to order a paper and receive same for any length of time and then try to have it stopped without paying dues, subject that man to the suspicion that he is either careless or wishes to violate his promise and obligations. We will cheerfully help you out of your difficulty, and will apologize and make amends if we are at fault.

Strange Playmates.

A pretty story has been told me of a small blue dove, or perhar more properly a pigeon, owned by Mr. J. Clifford, of Bath, M. ine, that has escaped the claws of the neighborhood cats and prowling hawks, and is living well and hearty at the ripe old age of five years or rather was when the incident was related. He was certainly quiet remarkable bird in his way.

When the old family cat has her brood of little ones every spring he is delighted and seems to think they are under his especial care, and will hover around them, talking to them in a low, cooing tone.

When the old cat is away he will work diligently, carrying straws in his beak and spreading across them, and woe to the hand that tries to take a kitten from the nest when he has charge. He will peck and strike with his wings anyone who comes near. He is not blest with that gentle character and disposition of his race, and would rather fight than not, and makes a good protector; but after the kittens get large enough to play they have fine times together.

The kittens seem to think he is a playmate for them and will roll together, a strange mixture of fur and feathers. But sometimes he does not agree to such rough usage, and he flies off after giving a sly pinch to the kittens' tails. He and the family cats are on the best of terms and all eat from the same dish.—G. B. Griffith.

Burley Tobacco Society Meeting.

By the authority vested in me as Chairman of the initial meeting of the Burley Tobacco Society, by the constitution of said society (Art. VII, Sec. 1) and in accordance with its provision, I hereby call the first meeting of the members of the society for the purpose of electing precinct representatives on the County Boards. All members who have pledged their tobacco to the society are instructed to meet at the usual place of voting in their respective precincts at 2 o'clock, Friday, November 30th, and to select their representative on the County Board. Further, the representatives so selected are instructed to meet in their respective county seats at 2 o'clock, Saturday, December 1st, and select their representatives on the District Board. And furthermore, the members of the District Board thus elected are instructed to meet at 2 o'clock in the office of the society at Winchester, Kentucky, on December 3rd, to organize as the District Board, and to select the General Manager, and to take charge of the affairs of the society.

The precinct meetings shall be organized by the selection of a temporary chairman and secretary, and the meeting shall proceed at once to the election of a representative on the County Board, whose election to the County Board shall be certified by the temporary secretary.

The County Board shall be organized by the selection of a temporary chairman and secretary, and shall proceed at once to the election of permanent county chairman and a permanent secretary. The secretary shall certify the election of the chairman, which certificate shall constitute his credentials as member of the District Board.

Done this 20th day of November, 1906, at Winchester, Ky.

It is proposed to build a great Baptist University at Louisville with an endowment of $1,000,000, which will in time equal the Baptist institution at Chicago. Dr. A. Gatliff of Williamsburg several months ago gave $100,000 to the fund. At a meeting in Louisville last week Theodore Harris, president of the Louisville National Banking Co., gave $100,000, making one-fifth of the total amount asked given by two individuals.

A Sad Death.

A True Account

A fashionable lady attended revival meetings at the Morgan-Street Church, Chicago. Deep conviction settled on her soul.

She wept and said she would be glad to find peace, but was not ready to give up the pleasures of the world. To drown her convictions she absented herself from the house of God. Time hurried on and soon she was on her death bed.

Realizing her condition she sent for a friend who had attended the meetings with her and who had listened to the spiritual pleadings and found the joy of pardoning love. This friend hurried to the bedside of the dying one. As she entered the room the dying woman looked at her with eyes of terror, and grasping her hand she exclaimed, "Oh stay with me till I am gone! I am dying and am going to hell! Tell Bro. C. (the minister) to preach hell as he has never preached it before, for I am going to hell!" Then pointing to the wardrobe she said, "Go there and you will see what has ruined my soul." She opened the door and saw the rich, fashionable clothing and turned again to the side of the dying woman, who raised herself up and sang the hymn she had so often heard at the meeting:

Parting to meet again at the judgment,
Parting to meet no more here below,
Oh, how sad the thought of thee,
Traveler to eternity!
Parting to meet again at the judgment.

As the last word fell from her lips she fell back on the pillow and her soul passed into eternity to meet the God whose mercy she had trifled away with gaudy toys of this earth. Dear reader, take warning from this sad death. Turn away from the vanities of earth and give God your heart and life's service, and eternal happiness shall be yours.

"I suffered habitually from constipation. Doan's Regulets relieved and strengthened the bowels, so that they have been regular ever since."—A. E. Davis, grocer, Sulphur Springs, Tex. 17-4t

An Appeal for the Children

A touching appeal is being sent out by the Kentucky Children's Home Society of Louisville, for a generous Thanksgiving remembrance. This is a long-established custom of the society, which usually meets with a generous response. This year, however, on account of the recent political campaign and other counter-causes, the society finds itself sorely in need of funds. The expense of accomplishing the rapidly-expanding work and of fulfilling its full duty to the great mass of destitute children of the State, is being greater, and unless the public comes to the aid of the institution the work will be greatly hampered this year. Destitute children are coming to the care of the society at the rate of more than a hundred a month, and the expense is necessarily great. The society is being asked on every hand to take charge of the orphans and abandoned children from every county in Kentucky, and its policy is not to turn a deaf ear to these entreaties. To continue this work it is necessary to call upon the public for a generous response to this Thanksgiving appeal.

Help to purify your town and county.

Caleb Power received a vote for Congress in the Eleventh District. Well?

The farmers and tobacco growers of Montgomery county in session here last week showed a determination not to yield to the money powers that had heretofore named the prices of their productions.

The Farmers of this State are organizing and will name the prices on their commodities at a price that carries with it a reasonable profit.

The Court of Appeals has affirmed judgment of the Clark Circuit Court in the case of B. Fult French against the Commonwealth in which French was found guilty of contempt of Court and fined $5,000. The opinion of the Court was delivered by Judge Settle, the whole court sitting. The court also affirmed judgment of the same court finding Felix Felner $3,000 and sentencing him to two years in the Clark county jail.

Whether or not Montgomery county is to be a place where people will seek homes or desire to continue as residents depends partially on the enforcement of law. This rests with the persons who know of violations and are willing to testify before grand juries, and with the juries who are to see that evil doers are punished. We are told that it is surprising to know how many men are hars or ignorantes when they are brought before grand juries.

WISDOM.

Governor Beckham will meet the favor of all men in the caution used relative to calling the legislature together for the purpose of enacting laws by which the observance of the Christian Sabbath will become strict. Such caution is wise, for should the legislature assemble and continue in session for days without enacting the needed laws it would entail an expense on our people of $1000 per day. It is therefore expedient that the representatives be interviewed on the subject of the call in advance.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving day. It is a time honored custom for many of our people to suspend all business and on bended knees, and uncovered head give praise to Him the source of bountiful supplies, joys, comforts, and peace, for the innumerable blessings granted during the year past, and to entreat His guiding hand for the future. For loving kindness for joys, love, peace, happiness and plenty. The people of Montgomery owe much, and one day out of three hundred and sixty-five is a very little time in which to render thanksgiving prayer.

We would thank The O God, for what thou has done for us and would praise thee as thou leadest thy people successful against wickedness and depravity in all its iniquitous forms.

LESSON FOR THE BOYS.
Seems Simple, But Will Make Them
Sit Up and Think.

Tell your youngster the celebrated story of the wise man of Persia who, being asked by the shah to name a present for himself, said his wants were so simple that he would be willing to accept grains of corn in compensation for all he had done for his royal master and the state. "Have the grains placed on a checkerboard," he said, "one on the first square, two on the second, four on the third, eight on the fourth, and keep on doubling until each of the 64 squares have been covered." The shah smiled, and hinted to his prime minister that the wise man must be humored, as he was a silly old thing. So the grains of corn were brought—about a pint; and one of the slaves was set to work filling the squares. Before 16 squares were filled the shah and his court began to be amazed. Great mathematicians were summoned to do the counting, and corn was brought in by the wagon load. By and by it threatened to fill the palace, then the palace grounds, then the city, then the whole of the shah's dominions, and a halt had to be called.

This yarn will set your boy thinking. If he has been naughty, say that you are going to punish him by allowing him to fill up the squares of the checkerboard with rice or mustard seed, and when the job is finished he may go play. See him laugh at you for the celery with which he will finish the task and be out with his chums. Then watch the lengthening of his countenance as he gets up to counting the first 1,000 grains. When the utter hopelessness of the job dawns upon him you relent, and he has learned a useful lesson. No child on earth will believe at first in the veracity of a father who tells him it would occupy a lifetime many times over to count out the grains for the 64 squares. He gives the merry ha ha!

SIGNING PETITIONS.
Some men in a western town were discussing a certain petition when one made the remark that there would be no trouble to get signers, for most people signed petitions upon request, without reading them.
Some doubted the statement, and it was agreed to test the matter.

A petition was written requesting Judge Petrie to leave town because he was unfit in character and influence to remain a citizen of such a moral and law-abiding community.
Now Judge Petrie was a man honored and esteemed, not only by his own neighbors, but a man of influence in his state, and especially in the church to which he belonged.

The petition was circulated and nearly 40 of the best citizens of the place signed it. Then it was taken to Judge Petrie and even he signed it without question. It was unanimously decided that the doubter of the value of petitions had the best of the argument.

CAPT. PINGREE AND THE RAIL.
Stephen Pingree, a brother of ex-Gov. Samuel Pingree, of Vermont, was, like the governor, a soldier in the civil war.

Stephen, however, did not promise to win laurels at the opening of his military career. When his rank was somewhat lower than that of colonel he was somewhat unruly, and caused his superiors considerable trouble.

Once when he had committed some offense against military discipline he was sentenced to pace up and down in front of his tent with a rail on his back for a certain time.
After he had been working out his punishment for a short time the guard came along.

"What on earth are you doing with that rail on your back, Capt.
Pingree?" asked the guard.

"The cows are out, and I am going to put up the fence," said the droll Vermontor, and kept on his way.

Schnapps Tobacco is Made ENTIRELY from Flue Cured Tobacco Grown in the Piedmont Country.
The Imitation Brands Have Schnapps Quality Only On the Outside Of the Plug

Hundreds of imitation brands are on sale that look like Schnapps tobacco. The outside of the imitation plugs of tobacco is flue cured the same as Schnapps, but the inside is filled with cheap, flimsy, heavily sweetened air cured tobacco. One chew of Schnapps will satisfy tobacco hunger longer than two chews of such tobacco. The color, size and shape of the tags, plugs and packages of certain imitation brands of tobacco have been made so much like Schnapps that they have often been accepted by buyers under the belief that they were getting Schnapps.
Sufficient proof has been secured to establish the fact that certain brands are infringements and in violation of the trade mark laws, yet the trade will continue to be imposed upon by these infringers until the suit already entered and now pending to protect Schnapps is decided. A great many of these imitations are claimed to be "just as good" as Schnapps, but there is only one genuine Schnapps. Be sure the letters on the tag, and stamped on the plug under the tag spell S-C-H-N-A-P-P-S and then you have it—the most wholesome tobacco produced, with just enough sweetening to preserve the mild, juicy, stimulating quality of the leaf tobacco. Expert tests prove that this flue cured tobacco, grown in the famous Piedmont region, requires and takes less sweetening than any other and has a wholesome, stimulating, satisfying effect on chewers.

If the tobacco you are chewing don't satisfy you more than the mere habit of expectorating, stop fooling yourself and chew Schnapps tobacco.
Schnapps is like the tobacco chewers formerly bought costing from 75c. to $1.00 per pound; Schnapps is sold at 50c. per pound, in 5c. cuts, strictly 10c. and 15c. plugs.

THANKSGIVING DAY

As It was and as It Is--Traced to the Piety of New England Fore Fathers.

BY REV. Z. GREENE, D. D.

The comparison suggested by this title is made between the old colonial times and these. The custom of an annual day of thanksgiving to God, appointed by the highest civil authority and observed with greater or less fidelity to its declared purpose by all the people, is to be traced here, not to the Jewish feasts of tabernacles, but to the piety of the New England forefathers.

It was not an annual observance at the outset. The first harvest gathered in the new land was followed by a day of Thanksgiving; but not so all harvests. Nor did the governor wait for the harvest-time to come. Nor did he limit himself to proclaiming a single day at thanks in the year. Abundant rains after a trying drought, or the timely arrival of vessels with provisions for the famine-threatened colonists were made occasion of public and united expressions of gratitude to God. If the silence of records is rightly interpreted; it was not until about the beginning of the eighteenth century that the day of thanksgiving became a regular yearly observance. But the annual festival evidently grew out of the occasional appointment.

From the beginning the religious spirit was dominant in colonial affairs. The pilgrims came here for religious purposes. They had a lively sense of God. They had unbounded faith in his providence. He was immediately concerned in all their experiences. To Him they looked for all good. Before they fasted and made confession and sought mercy in adversity, and in prosperity they did not fail to give him praise. In these matters, as in all else, they were very earnest men.

That Governor Bradford's call for a day of thanksgiving was not merely perfunctory, but carried his individual convictions is evident from his character, and is witnessed by the reverential reference to the goodness of God in his fragmentary poem on New England, found among his papers after his death. Here is an extract:

Famine once we had,
But other things God gave us in full store.
As fish and ground-nuts, to supply our strait;
That we might learn on Providence to wait,
And know by bread man lives not in need,

But by each word that doth from God proceed.
But a while after plenty did come in,
From his hand only who doth pardon sin,
And all did flourish like the pleasant green,
Which in the joyful spring is to be seen.

When the appointed day came it was observed with marked unanimity and heartiness. An almost Sabbath sanctity was accorded to it, especially in its earlier hours. Servile labor was omitted. Business was suspended. The church was thronged for a long and absorbing service. High officials were conspicuously present in the sanctuary as participants and not as mere observers.

And the festive element was not wholly wanting. In connection with the first thanksgiving day Governor Bradford sent four men into the woods for game wherewith to make a feast, that, as he said, they "might after a more special manner rejoice together." There is a little touch of nature in the governor's phrase that should not escape attention. He regarded the feast as promoting a rejoicing "after a more special manner." The rejoicing in the church would be, he thought, of a general character—very good, very proper, but somewhat lacking in concreteness, and perhaps not adapted to enlist all natures. But the feast of savory game just from the woods! that would "after a more special manner" appeal to the sensibilities of all men alike, and would quicken in all sensations of gladness which have their source at a lower point in their anatomy than the heart.

We may readily believe that even these sadly earnest men, whose sternness has in all probability been exaggerated in the hard visages that conventional art has given them, were not proof against the softening effects of the feast, nor unbending to the social amenities that would naturally attend upon and follow the pleasures of the table. The controversial writings are streaked with lines of grim humor. They were human. Merry making was not wholly foreign to them, though their gambling may have been of an elephanitic sort. The rose blushed against the granite.

Turning from those times to these, it is plain that changes have come in the observance of the day.

The changes have not been so radical, as at first glance, we might be inclined to think nor have they been all for the worse.

These changes have come, not by civil or ecclesiastical decree, but in a very natural way indeed. The influences that have conspired to produce these changes are in view. They may be gathered up into a single expression. A vast increase of material possessions without a commensurate religious development. Were it not for the free field Christian truth has had for its own exposition, and were it not for the providential chastisements that from time to time have fallen upon us, it would seem as if by this date we might have lapsed wholly into materialism. As it is Thanksgiving day as it is observed is a suggestive spectacle.

The two elements we have seen in the early Thanksgiving observances, worship and the festival, are still prime factors in the day; but in the common custom the latter has been re-enforced at the expense of the former. At first it was a holy day with a holiday flavor; now it is a holiday with a holy-day name. The annex has become the main building. The intrinsic and the extrinsic have changed places. The feast and the frolic drown out the sermon and the song of praise. It is a day of crooked elbows instead of bended knees. Many people assume that jollity and gratitude are synonyms on Thanksgiving day, and deceive themselves into the fancy that they are grateful when they are only grateful.

A still wider divergence from the early observance of the day appears in a very common perversion of it to sporting purposes.

"Sport" has of late years obtained an entrance and standing within the margin of a so-called respectability, greedily to the damage of the popular taste; and of all the holidays of the year, Thanksgiving day has been invaded by its dehumanizing pastimes and excitements. In the cities and larger towns the game of football, with its fierce rivalries and its rough, and often brutal, methods, and in rural places the shooting-match, in which pigeons and turkeys are mutilated for the display of the marksman's skill—these are in evidence as to the gross misuse of the day. More and worse than perversions, they are positively hostile to the kindly spirit that the day is fitted to express and promote.

It is well to reflect, however, that the true spirit of the day has not been wholly lost, and that, comparing the festival of this year with that of 250 years ago, there are some things upon which we may well congratulate ourselves. Notice this, that the observance of the day has survived the separation of church and state—a fact that the men who banished Roger Williams would have scouted as impossible. Notice further, that since the time of the civil war, and as part of the outcome of it, the annual Thanksgiving has expanded from a sectional to a national observance. Now, as at the first, the proclamation of the chief magistrate, naming the day and the reason for it, voices the best thought of the masses of the people, who approve of the appointment more generally than they keep it—for sentiments and convictions are always in advance of actions. It is a very telling thing that once a year the highest official in the land should, with the approval of the people, make formal declaration of a personal God who is directly concerned in the welfare of men and who accepts their thanks for his favors. And though only a meager fraction of the populace is to be found in the places where thanks are rendered, even when in order to make a respectable gathering fragments of several congregations combine under the pleasant name of a "union service," it is still a fact of large import that there are persons not a few who by the fireside and in the house of God do most sincerely and devoutly fulfill the intention of the day.

Two beautiful features of the Thanksgiving anniversary not entirely unknown to the forefathers, yet not highly developed among them, are coming into increased and increasing prominence, namely, the family reunion and the remembrance of the poor. There is no other day in the year when the institution of the family may so fittingly be made the subject of united and fervent expressions of gratitude to God—no other day so well adapted for a common celebration of domestic joys and affections. The place that the home holds in the social life of America gives it distinct eminence among the blessings for which thanks are to be tendered—blessings revived and sampled afresh in the midst of the praises. The scattered members of the household return or send greetings to those who are there, and the family ties are strengthened in the interchange of love and cheer. As a natural sequence of this there is a quickened sympathy for the homeless and for those whose homes are in shadow. This prompt beneficence springs spontaneously forth, and fullness, if it be not through selfish, finds pleasure in ministering to want; and Thanksgiving day becomes the occasion of a generous outflow of a charity that does not exhaust itself in one pulsation, but rather is made more ready by this special exercise for a frequent service.

Thus it appears that while Thanksgiving day as it is, is in some significant way behind Thanksgiving day as it was, in other respects it is in advance of the earliest observances. It remains for all who believe in God to stand for all that is best in the day, and to demonstrate in the home and in the sanctuary that they are at one with the Psalmist when he says, "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord."

An Aged Sufferer Cured of Catarrh.

The Kentucky Remedy Co., Lexington, Ky.

Gentlemen:—For the last seventeen years I have suffered from an aggravated case of catarrh in my head, for which I could find no permanent relief. My hearing was badly impaired, there was a constant dripping of mucus in my throat and a nauseated feeling. I had frequent dizzy spells, and flushes of fever. There was hardly a time, day or night, when I was free from headache or pains in some part of my body. My digestion was failing me and my kidneys were affected. They said I had rheumatism. I was troubled with constant pain off of the bowels and got no satisfaction from what I ate. My daughters thought that on account of my age I would never find a cure, but as a last resort, I commenced to use Dr. Andes' Great Prescription, and, thank God! after taking only two bottles, I can say that I am a well woman. Every symptom of my former trouble has disappeared, and I feel ten years younger. I eat and sleep as well as any woman of my age. (Signed) MRS. MAGGIE SAMPLE
